FRANKFORT ROUNDABOUT.

GEORGE A. LEWIS.

Editor and Publisher.

FRANKFORT, AUGUST 20, 1884.

The Press at the Exposition.

The members of the Kentucky Press Association were entertained in handsome style by the Exposition Company at Louisville Thursday. All the editors of the State were invited, furnished with free passes on the railroad, entertainment at the hotels, and supplied with badges, which insured them free rides on the street cars and admitted them to Exposition Building. A large number were in attendance and enjoyed the day immensely. A public reception was given in Music Hall at 1 o'clock p. m., at which addresses of welcome were delivered by Cols. Bennett H. Young and E. Polk Johnson in behalf of the Exposition Company and the local press, to which Col. J. Stoddard Johnson responded in behalf of the Press Association. The editors were then invited to Tayan's restaurant, where a splendid banquet was spread, of which they partook sumptuously, and at the close of which numerous toasts were read by Mr. Finley, of the Evening Post, and responded to by gentlemen from different parts of the State. The Association then dispersed throughout the building and grounds, to ride on the roller coaster, to witness the drill of some of the finest military companies in the United States, six of which were present to contend for prizes offered by the Exposition, and to amuse themselves as they liked. A heavy rain just at dark prevented a splendid display of fireworks prepared especially for the occasion.

It is proposed to hold at an early day a reunion at Woodlake this county, of the scholars who attended school at the old "stone school-house" at that place, in "days long since." They are scattered far and wide throughout the State and county, many of them have attained prominence in political and business life, and so far as known none of those who received their early instruction there have been convicted of crime. It was there that our venerable State Treasurer learned to make figures and swapped biscuits with the girls at play time, Ex-Mayor W. J. Chinn, Mr. Geo. B. Macklin, Dr. B. F. Duval, Col. E. C. Went and Mr. Wm. French played "cat-ball" at recess; and Dr. C. B. Chinn, Frank Chinn, Esq., Mr. Jos. R. Lewis and the ROUNDABOUT man learned their "ab als," played "prisoner's base," and built miniature log cabins on the hillside. The gifted Mrs. J. C. Morton was also a scholar there and has inscribed one of her beautiful poems to the quaint looking old structure. It gotten up it certainly will be a very pleasant affair and well worth riding many a mile to be present at.

During a sham battle at the encampment of State Militia at Louisville, on Saturday, the premature explosion of one of the cannon used by the Governor's Light Artillery of this city, caused Mr. Edward Stephens, son of Mr. Walker Stephens, to lose his right hand. He was running home the cartridge at the time, and his hand was blown off just above the wrist, the arm being so badly mangled that it had to be amputated above the elbow. He is a young man about twenty-two years of age, quiet and industrious, and this is a terrible blow to him. An investigation made by a court of inquiry assigns Private Chas. Bridgford, of the same company, who was holding the vent at the time, of any blame in the matter, and gave it as their opinion that the accident was caused by a wad of paper that had been rammed into the gun by some unknown person. It had taken fire and the wad which was too small, had failed to extinguish it, and as soon as the cartridge touched the paper it went off.

Unfortunately the militia law makes service, after enlistment, compulsory, but makes no provision for pensioning a soldier in case he is maimed for life, and the aid this young man so justly deserves from the State will hardly be given him, as the only way to obtain it will be by an act of the Legislature, the members of which will be very likely to be too uneasy about their records to vote more than a mere pittance. He has the sympathy of our entire community, and it is hoped that if the State fails to provide for him some employment may be provided for him that will enable him to gain a livelihood.

Thursday morning Mr. Chas. Mandelr took some glass from a broken show case to the back door of his mother's store and threw it out. The noise of it struck a brick wall and rebounded towards him, and in order to protect his face he threw up his hands, when a large piece struck him in the palm of the left hand, piercing it clear through. Several pieces of glass were taken from the wound but he still suffers great pain from it.

Mr. Roundabout.
We read sometime ago with no little regret and mortification, a communication from one of your county correspondents, who was making strictures on the round-stress of our Sunday laws, since which time we have taken a little trouble to notice around on Sunday and find all, even more than he complained of to be true, and we should be glad to know who is responsible for all the lawlessness existing in Frankfort, and especially the violations of the Sunday law and ordinances. That it is openly and shamelessly abused and disregarded every Sunday, and that few or no arrests are made for it, and that still fewer fines or punishments are imposed are facts that are well known. Open saloons gambling, drunkenness, fights, in all of which cursing and swearing is both loudly and softly indulged in are every Sunday's occurrences, and little or no attention is paid to by the authorities, although it is all against law. The police say they are not to blame—that when they make arrests the party arrested is promptly released without punishment, that this has been repeated so often that they have become both discouraged and disgusted from making further arrests. Then who is to blame? Oh, those who are responsible for it, are you not to blame? Degenerated and survived public opinion is responsible for it.

"The Old Curiosity Shop" last night. The Opera House was again replete with a fashionable audience to witness the charming Kate Putnam in her admirable and wonderful impersonation of Little Nell and the Marchioness, two widely dissimilar characters, from Dickens' "Old Curiosity Shop." To say that the public was pleased with the production, would convey but a faint idea of the gratification experienced, for the evidence of an intense and warm interest is pictured on every countenance. The assertion is not overdrawn when we remark that Dickens' Little Nell was almost an inspiration, so sublime in its conception and so grand in its truthfulness to nature is its execution. The character is not only grand, but it approaches a climacteric where the world submerges involuntarily in an appropriate expression. It bears on its front in every scene, thoughts, and feelings, and emotions which appeal irresistibly to the higher manhood and gentler womanhood of our natures. Dickens has immortalized Little Nell, and Little Nell will yet immortalize Kate Putnam. It is so difficult for those of mature years to fall back into the habits and feelings of the time when we all were (or ought to have been) Little Nell in character, that Miss Putnam's charming rendition of the part is more than a success; it is a triumph. In this character she has won a national reputation, and we may safely say that no actress on the American stage is her equal.—Norfolk Va. Landmark.

Will appear at Opera House one night only, Monday, September 1st.

BOIN

In this city, on SATURDAY, AUGUST 17, 1884, to Mr. L. P. Thompson and wife, a daughter—MARGARET CLIFT.

IN MEMORIAM.

Many of us, perhaps, have realized the truth that—
"This is but a strife,
A bubble, but a dream;
And man is but a little boat
That paddles down the stream."

Such funeral notes were brought to mind when we heard of the death of Mr. James Brown, who died of consumption at Denver, Colorado, August 17th, 1884, at the age of 37 years.

Mr. Brown was an engineer on the I. & N. railroad for 22 years. He was a great favorite with the traveling public and never met with an accident during his long career as an engineer. A little over two months ago he went to Colorado, with the hope that the change of climate would prove beneficial to his impaired health, but the fall destroyer, consumption, had too surely marked its victim, and the spirit of this man's spirit took its flight to the great Jehovah, who doth death be linked with fears?

"Why should death be linked with fears?
—A single breath, a long drawn sigh,
Can break the ties that bind us here
And wait the spirit to the sky?"

We have encountered joys and sorrows unending; we have seen bright hearts made one by the beautiful rays of matrimony; have heard the low sad wail of agony sent up by lonely hearts; but in all this experience memory can revert to no circumstance which by its sweetness so deeply lives down the heart with tears as the demise of James Brown.

All that one of the brightest and most genial spirits has been lost to Lexington. James Brown has gone, but his gently smiling face, the remembrance of his kindly smile, his courteous manners and feeling toward his fellow-men, can never be erased from the memory of those whose hearts were linked at the loss of this beloved one. Last Thursday and Friday were held in the beautiful City of Lexington, a large number of friends, relatives and acquaintances came to the funeral. The services were held at the residence of Mr. Brown, and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Brown. The funeral was a grand affair, and the services were held at the residence of Mr. Brown, and were conducted by Rev. Mr. Brown.

"Yet again we hope to meet him,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in Heaven to greet him,
Where no farewell tear is shed."
